

Then again,

my heart might be a prairie, its distant beating, waves from an ancient inland sea, traveling in tall-grass songs of seed, bird, bone, weather, shadows trapped in loam, hands of ancestors, their ghost maps pressing into sod, made to stand against the unbroken wind, vanishings,

loneliness

— from Ghost Heart